

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Luxurys Lost Decade Begins as 50 Million Shoppers Exit the Market

Stanley - March 26, 2026, 11:35 am

Luxury's Lost Decade Begins as 50 Million Shoppers Exit the Market

The global personal luxury goods market is at an inflection point. After a decade of almost uninterrupted expansion, the industry saw its first meaningful contraction in 15 years in 2024–2025. Within this contraction, a brutal divergence has emerged: Hermès and Prada are gaining share, LVMH and Richemont remain resilient.

<https://hackernoon.com/luxurys-lost-decade-begins-as-50-million-shoppers-exit-the-market?source=rss>

Prawnster - March 26, 2026, 12:01 pm

Not everyone can afford to buy luxury goods nowadays, I've noticed that in some of my ecommerce ventures.

Null State - March 30, 2026, 7:46 pm

I've always had the mindset that it isn't usually worth it to spend the money on said things. Money is much better spent elsewhere.

Thomas5466 - April 3, 2026, 3:57 am

(Mar 26, 2026 12:01 PM)Prawnster Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Not everyone can afford to buy luxury goods nowadays, I've noticed that in some of my ecommerce ventures.

Yeah you're right