

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Apple Warns Older iPhones Vulnerable to Coruna, DarkSword Exploit Kit Attacks

Stanley - March 28, 2026, 1:05 pm

Apple Warns Older iPhones Vulnerable to Coruna, DarkSword Exploit Kit Attacks

Apple is urging users who are still running an outdated version of iOS to update their iPhones to secure against web-based attacks carried out via powerful exploit kits like Coruna and DarkSword. These attacks employ malicious web content to target out-of-date versions of iOS, triggering an infection chain that leads to the theft of sensitive data.

"For example, if you're using an older

<https://thehackernews.com/2026/03/apple-warns-older-iphones-vulnerable-to.html>

Null State - March 29, 2026, 11:54 pm

(Mar 28, 2026 01:05 PM)Stanley Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Apple Warns Older iPhones Vulnerable to Coruna, DarkSword Exploit Kit Attacks

Apple is urging users who are still running an outdated version of iOS to update their iPhones to secure against web-based attacks carried out via powerful exploit kits like Coruna and DarkSword. These attacks employ malicious web content to target out-of-date versions of iOS, triggering an infection chain that leads to the theft of sensitive data.

"For example, if you're using an older

<https://thehackernews.com/2026/03/apple-warns-older-iphones-vulnerable-to.html>

I believe one of these is a one click RCE if I remember correctly from reading about it elsewhere. Realistically though, the only legitimate reason I see not to update iOS is for jailbreaks, or there one being likely due to other exploits known already. Even then, most jailbreak users aren't too keen on trying to actively secure their devices.