Keep the modesty away, what are you most proud of about yourself?

I was really proud of this Real world Threat Intelligence workflow that I wrote up. I presented it to some mates but they were afraid of the criminality of it all. I'd need a handful of people to set it up with together but obviously that's not gonna work now.

Ehh, one of the only things I am really proud of is the dedication and hours I put into learning code/development is finally starting to pay off!

I'm proud of three things in particular. First, despite the mental struggles and the socioeconomic and cultural hardships that were more noticeable when I was younger, I never attempted to take my own life, and I'm still here. Second, I'm grateful that I was never influenced by the questionable behaviors that were very common in the region where I was born. And finally, I'm proud that I didn't let myself be pressured or broken when there was social pressure—especially from older guys—to take part in excessive drinking or drug use. (Just to be clear, I'm speaking from a personal perspective; I'm not discrediting or looking down on anyone who may be in a similar situation involving use or dependency.)

I made good progress in getting my life back on track after it fell apart some years ago.

I also saved up more money than I did in any point in my life. It's been sobering thinking about how far I've come since I was younger.

Now I have more options, whether it be studying a degree in cyber security or start a business, but I have a long way to go, so I still have to keep learning and working diligently.

Now this is something I would like to see! I have a few models my self. I am proud that no matter what struggles I have faced I have remained the same person and stayed true to my self and that has carried me far.
