"Spawnism" is a dangerous online phenomenon reported in 2025 still active in 2026, primarily linked to the gaming platform Roblox and Discord, where it has been described as a "cult" targeting vulnerable children and teenagers. It stems from a fictional, fan-made narrative within the Roblox horror game Forsaken (often titled The Spawn), which was warped by malicious actors to manipulate players into self-harm.

Key Aspects of the Spawnism Phenomenon:

Origins: The cult is loosely based on a fictional, villainous cult from the Roblox game Forsaken. In the game's lore, the cult worships "The Spawn" or "Dusekka," believing they can "respawn" or live again after death.

Manipulation and Danger: While the game itself is fiction, real-world users (described as trolls or predators) created online groups to promote "Spawnism," encouraging children to self-harm to "please the spawn god" and "respawn" in a new life.

Targeting Vulnerable Youth: The group often targeted teenagers dealing with depression, anxiety, or bad family situations, offering them a sense of belonging while isolating them from outside help.

Digital Reach: The group was notably active on Discord and through Roblox, often using "trusted connections" voice chat to bypass safety filters and interact with minors directly.

The "Anti-Spawnism" Stance: Many Roblox users and community members have sought to combat this, emphasizing that the cult is a dangerous hoax designed to exploit young people.

Important Context:

Spawnism is not a real religion or spiritual practice. It is a predatory, online social-manipulation tactic.

The developers of Forsaken have separated their fictional game lore from these dangerous real-world activities.

It's extremely sad that there are people who find it "funny" to encourage children and teenagers to harm themselves. I hope the proper authorities can do something about this and put an end to it soon.

I've noticed Discord seems to be the centre of a lot of this kind of activity, and the platform does "some" stuff against them like taking down some servers but not until a lot of reports etc.

People have to have pretty horrendous lives to go around targeting children imo.

RangoWorld - April 17, 2026, 2:05 pm

Haven't noticed this particular cult. But I have observed on Discord that there are people (pedos) who are trying to get into an online relationship with children. It's something to be mindful of, if you know any child who uses Discord. Take it as a caution

This is unfortunate. But yeah, that is how they work. These people know they are outside of normal, they try to infect and slide themselves into respectable groups (church) or hide themselves in self-contained spaces (discord) to do what they enjoy, having power over vulnerable people.

Yeah, what a shame that whole thing is. I have small siblings who are no longer allowed to play Roblox as a result of these disgusting people. There is a special place in hell for these predators.

Police in my country arrested a lot of pedophiles last week that were taunting kids through Roblox Snapchat and Discord.

This is lowkey disgusting.

It's not low key anything. But apparently 1 or 2% of all people have Antisocial Personality Disorder and such people are very attracted to anything that is most horrific to others and to what will harm others the most.

Yeah, one thing that is known for psychopaths is that they care only for themselves, not for anybody else.

Roblox PR has handled this in the worst possible way and these complaints have been made since mid 2000s and they do nothing to address. They maybe have predators on staff.

Yeah, you have to wonder being that they can never seem to solve the problem. It's unacceptable really. Can't believe that game has been around as long as it has.

Sift - April 29, 2026, 2:51 am

People who target children are a waste of oxygen.

It's disturbing how prevalent these online predator networks have become across multiple platforms. While no system can be completely foolproof, the consistent failure of platforms like Roblox to address these issues effectively for over a decade suggests either incompetence or willful negligence in protecting their youngest users. What specific measures do you think would be most effective for tech companies to implement to better protect children while still allowing legitimate interaction?

Roblox is a key culprit for allowing these activities to blossom, but discord isn't doing any better. It takes a lot of time consumption & resources to take down these predators sadly, I do think however we can also do our part in reporting these discords to appropriate authorities, doing predator busts, self onsite and for these type of guys honestly some "grey" work against them could be great too.

I agree mostly here. It is not just the responsibility of the platform operators themselves, but the community as a whole. Everyone has their part to play here and everyone can help in this particular regard.

Mastercarder - May 8, 2026, 2:38 am

Nah this stuff gets creepy fast once weird people start targeting vulnerable kids behind the whole "edgy Roblox lore" thing.

The dangerous part isn't the fake cult itself, it's the manipulation behind it. Discord echo chambers + isolated teenagers is a bad combo. Internet cults now just hide behind memes, games and "community."

This reminds me of the Blue Whale App that appeared few years ago , consists of 40 challenges to make simultaneously in 40 days span that leads at the end to a suicide on the 40th challenge !
