

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Inquiry Regarding Specialized Security Research Documentation & Marketplace Complianc

CYBERWAR WEAPONS - April 15, 2026, 6:08 pm

Hello HackForums Support,

I am reaching out to ensure compliance with current site rules and US cyber-regulations regarding the distribution of high-level source documentation and security research.

I currently hold extensive documentation and research data regarding historical frameworks (similar in architecture to Pegasus and WannaCry), specifically focusing on:

System Vulnerability Analysis: Documentation on UI/UX manipulation and its physiological effects on users.

Hardware/Signal Interaction: Research into cellular transfers, power grid interactions, and their effects on physical asset transparency/security.

My Goals:

Monetization: I am looking to sell or license this research/documentation to qualified parties (researchers, red-teamers, or collectors).

Compliance: I want to ensure that these sales do not violate HF "Rule Breaks" and remain aligned with US interests during current global cyber-warfare conditions.

Ethics: I am seeking the "fruits of my labor" without facilitating malicious activity or "wrongdoing" against the state or the community.

Could you please advise on the following:

Which specific HF Marketplace section is most appropriate for high-value documentation of this nature?

Are there specific "Safe Harbor" or "Data Preservation" tags I should use to signify this is for research and system hardening purposes?

Does HF offer an escrow service or verified middleman for high-value research transfers?

Best regards,
GD.