It used to work before with mass reports and spam sessions, but nowadays Telegram barely reacts to that. Their moderation is overloaded and a lot of reports just get ignored unless it's a legal complaint or something serious. If someone can actually take down a bot fast, it's usually through contacts or a proper abuse/legal route and those services are usually expensive. From what I've seen, real ones charge way more than $100, more like $500+ if they can actually do it.

i saw someone does that, after 2 hours the bot target was deleted , so i think reports still working but at some other way , i think with aged premium accounts .
but for sure its possible :/

Yeah 100%, there are ways to do it. I was looking into that too before. I'm pretty sure there are a couple of different methods one of them is probably like you said, using aged or premium accounts with higher report weight. But it's hard to know exactly how they do it.

If you end up finding something that actually works, let me know too, I'm curious about it.
