Good luck with that. Android's architecture is fundamentally different from Windows. All apps are sandboxed and isolated from each other.

Needs 24/7 screen grab recording + cam recording + audio, device action logs (install of app, open/close/delete app, etc), web history capture, anti-deletion mechanisms / autobackup (files that are deleted should be able to be recovered if need be).

Not sure why there isn't proper functionality for monitoring apps that are installed like social media, chat apps, dating apps, et cetera aside from the notification monitoring; there are some options out there that automatically at least record activity within apps flagged as risky, or any apps that a user puts on a list for such.

If you'd offer all that at the highest tier + make the highest tier like $75 per 3mo (I am not paying a bunch for a crazy pro software, I will not pay crazy premium price), I'd def use it for my kids and likely a few employee phones

I'd be willing to try it if these were added.

[MAJOR UPDATE] Enhanced Control Center: Auto-Screen Recorder, Geofencing & Stability Improvements

It's been a while since my last update on this project, but I've been busy refining the core architecture to make it more reliable for real-world usage. I wanted to share the latest features that bring this monitoring solution to a production-ready level.

What's New in this Update:

? Auto-Screen Recorder (Video Mode): We've moved beyond simple screenshots. You can now record actual video activity from selected apps. It's fully customizable, allowing you to set upload conditions like "WiFi-only" or "Charging-only" to ensure seamless performance without draining the device's battery or data.

? Advanced Geofencing: I've integrated a visual Geofencing tool. You can now define a specific radius on the map, and the system will keep you informed the moment the device enters or leaves that area.

? Connectivity & Wake-up: The Control Center is now more responsive than ever. With the new "Wake & Unlock" feature, you can wake the device remotely to get instant updates, ensuring you're never left waiting for the next sync.

? Utility Suite: A new set of remote tools has been added for total control:

Torch Control: Toggle the flashlight remotely for quick identification.

App List & WiFi History: Get full visibility over installed applications and network connection logs.

Play Sound & Toast Messaging: Need to locate the device? Trigger a remote sound or send a custom toast message directly to the screen.

Stability Focus:

This update significantly improves background stability. I've optimized how the device communicates with the server, ensuring that commands are delivered reliably even when the device is in power-saving modes. You'll notice less battery impact and a much smoother experience overall.

Check out the new interface:

See the full gallery here: <https://imgur.com/a/onfLdO1>

I'm continuously working on performance optimizations. If you've been using the previous version, I highly recommend upgrading your backend to enjoy these new capabilities.

Feedback is always welcome. Let me know what features you'd like to see next!

Bro, you must be a terrible hacker, hahaha. Most modern rats have the ability to inject into a banking app; we've been doing this for over a year through injections. When you log into the banking app, your screen appears, allowing you to capture your PIN or login and password.

I'm pretty good at cybersecurity actually and understand Android's architecture pretty well. The idea of one unprivileged and sandboxed Android app injecting into the memory space of another is mindblowing. It's like a website injecting malware into a Windows process.
