Thread: Conspiracy theorieswhats your favorite and which one do you hate?

As you all know, the pursuit of power and knowledge has often been limited by various factors—political, economic, social, and cultural. That said, do any of you have a favorite conspiracy theory? One that makes you think, “Damn, this might actually have a different explanation than the official one”? A theory you’ve actually looked into a bit, instead of just blindly following the wild ideas of a group of conspiracy theorists.

And speaking of wild ideas, do any of you have a theory you absolutely can’t stand? One that just tires you out because of how ridiculous yet popular it is? Have you ever argued with someone who strongly believes in something like that?

According to AI, these are the most plausible theories—ones that are much, much more believable.

More serious:

1. Large corporations suppress clean technologies
2. The sugar industry manipulated nutritional science
3. The pharmaceutical industry hides or delays medications
4. Governments run massive citizen surveillance programs
5. Unethical government experiments on citizens without consent

And these are the popular ones that are... a bit strange.

Least believable:

1. Reptilians (David Icke)
2. Flat Earth
3. The Moon landing was staged by Stanley Kubrick

4. Vaccines cause autism and contain microchips (5G)

5. The Illuminati control all entertainment
