

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Project Blue Beam is not the peace of mind you are looking for

Hackers - May 13, 2026, 1:45 pm

When it comes to the conspiracy called Project Blue Beam, I think many people have the wrong idea. Before I get into that, I will breakdown some notes about the conspiracy theory that says a new world order will utilize technology to trick the rest of the world into a new belief system.

Let us hope the conspiracy is not accurate. I personally do not believe it is, although I think it is possible for smaller populations to be manipulated, lied to, and controlled in the advent of new evidence. I do not think we will see the PBB play out on a global scale, but since I've seen so many people seemingly prefer PBB to other theories, I thought I should write this thread.

Quote:Serge Monast (1945 – 5 or 6 December 1996[1]) was a Canadian conspiracy theorist. He is mostly known for his promotion of the Project Blue Beam conspiracy theory, which posits a plot to facilitate a totalitarian world government by destroying Abrahamic religions and replacing them with a New Age belief system using futuristic NASA technology and involving a faked alien invasion or fake extraterrestrial encounter meant to deceive nations into uniting under a new world government.[2][3]

Or if you want a good watch, here is President Reagan's speech in which he suggests we need some outside, global threat to help us solve our differences, and unite together to face an alien threat from outside of our world.

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bfS7FrN5aNQ>]

Some say that this plan is real, and some obviously fear it... But there's an odd group of PBB-believers that seem to find comfort in it, as if it's not terrifying on its own.

When it comes to the UAP topic, there are obviously tons of claims and theories... Some are more accepted than others. While one person might say that there is a time-traveling species of aliens called grays harvesting souls, another person (like me) might say "hey, that orb flew in a way that is not aligned with how we understand gravity & physics, but I have no evidence of who/what/where/why, and I shall note this down in the hopes that we can find answers later."

-- My point is that I don't claim to know the answers, only the evidence I have seen - which still leaves many questions. Others try to fill in the blanks (its aliens! its Russia! Its China! Its the USA! It's us from the future! Its demons!, etc etc etc) , and this can be scary...

I've noticed on SEVERAL occasions in the last 2 weeks alone that people say "its just project blue beam bro" or similar. HmMMMMMM

Well shit, that's not so good guys, and here's why.

The Project Blue Beam conspiracy doesn't just end with "some government tells us there are aliens and then we all follow them under 1 flag/nation". No. For Project Blue Beam to truly work, it requires indisputable evidence, and a global threat. It requires aircraft that resemble unknown technology flying around the world, tricking most countries' citizens & leaders... It requires technology that can genuinely defeat a top military.

Project Blue Beam is not the peace of mind you are looking for because in order for PBB to actually work, it still requires a global invasion or manipulation.

I think people use PBB as a feel-good excuse, like "oh well, of course there's no threat, this is just project blue beam." ... But guys, the UAP topic has been investigated and hidden from public view for many, many, many decades. They've had time to perfect their plans, hone their skills, practice the deployment, and prepare for a mock/fake planetary invasion.

I've heard a few people here on HF mention Project Blue Beam as a relief, and someone in my own immediate family also believes in Project Blue Beam, to the point where they don't care about the UAP topic at all..

I hope this thread inspires the PBB believers to think again. It's not that great for peace of mind... Because PBB only works if the majority of the world believes it, and that my friends it's a much scarier thought than many others I can think of.

If PBB is true, which I don't believe it is, then what we're talking about is the US Gov having tech that is so superior, all of the other countries mistake it as non-human intelligence and essentially bow to it/them.

TLDR:

Project Blue Beam is an unproven conspiracy theory.

Project Blue Beam relies on the entire planet believing that they are being dominated by a superior, non-human force, so that they join together under 1 nation, 1 flag, and 1 new world order to defend the planet against the alien invasion.

Project Blue Beam is frequently mentioned by people who seem to think it's a safer option than many of the crazier, harder to believe conspiracies/theories.

PBB doesn't work based on rumors and digital tricks. It works with overwhelming force, where the technology deployed against Earth's humans IS superior, and the only lie is where it comes from.

I think many people are treating PBB as a "total lie" as-in there is no dominating force. Wrong. PBB plan, if true, would genuinely involve a willingness to deploy force against innocents, allow for uncountable collateral damage, and to do so until the nations of Earth surrender or otherwise bend the knee to the new world order. Not so nice...

I hope my thread is enlightening to those who need to hear it, for why PBB would not be a relief.

PBB is not the peace of mind that some people think it is.

TLDR of the TLDR:

Project Blue Beam conspiracy only works if people believe it, and that would involve a LOT of death to pull off.

Pr0m3th3us - May 13, 2026, 2:11 pm

Only Nodes puts a TLDR of his TLDR.

So i rarely side with anything any politician says but i believe Regan is not exactly wrong when he said that. I mean just look at 9/11, obviously not some attack outside our world but it was def enough to unite the country for a period of time. Can you imagine one on a larger scale? And not just some religious fanatics? I believe first everyone would loose their shit, then the governments would blame each other because of their EGO's, then the governments would split off into 2 groups and ww3 would be upon us WHILE fighting some aliens or some shit. So yes it is possible in theory but i highly doubt it would play out like how Monast was hoping. And it def wouldn't bring the world together.

DramaKing - May 14, 2026, 5:02 am

Like a lot of conspiracy theories, there is zero evidence to indicate that it's happening, but its plausibility is fairly sound.

G Reviews - May 14, 2026, 12:47 pm

The one thing I don't respect about governments is that they decide when we go to war, against whom, and why we're going to war. The will of the people is never respected, we are almost certainly never asked if we want to go to war, and our children are sent to die in those wars and later we find out our war mongering president and all his buddies profited off that war while we lost our children. As to conspiracy theories, there are thousands and thousands of them. Too many of them to even count. But what relevance does it actually play in our day to day lives? Not much that I can say in my daily life or the people around me. Yes, you have nut cases that obsess over this shit, but there are crazies in every society who just can't handle much of anything. I read an article the other day about how priests globally were sent a letter by the governments to prepare congregations to receive news that there are aliens amongst us, but not to go bat shit crazy and reject the religious training nearly all of us receive. They were worried that if aliens exist, then that means all of the religious things we've been taught would go right out the window because with the existence of aliens that means God didn't create humans because aliens would have pre-dated humans and thus God wasn't the first entity around.

Hackers - May 26, 2026, 12:28 pm

(May 13, 2026 02:11 PM)Pr0m3th3us Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Only Nodes puts a TLDR of his TLDR.

You already know! Lol

~ great points by everyone so far ~

Eran - May 26, 2026, 12:47 pm

Bro I'll have my peace of mind when I buy a little peace of land in the middle of the forest, build my own little house and be self-sustainable. Miss me with this extra bs.

Hackers - May 26, 2026, 12:56 pm

(May 26, 2026 12:47 PM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Bro I'll have my peace of mind when I buy a little peace of land in the middle of the forest, build my own little house and be self-sustainable. Miss me with this extra bs.

Right on brudda, totally agree!

The UAP records are 100% related to sustainability, energy uses, etc. So I would expect that you and others will be extremely keen to see the next batch of files. I will personally ping you.

To be honest, this all has way more to do with energy systems than aliens or anything else. If you are worried about energy costs then UAP disclosure is probably the biggest nut you could ever have. We're talking about craft that can physically stop in 0 seconds and completely reverse direction. Imagine what that power looks like in an energy plant to harvest the energy... It completely defies our current systems, so we should all be rooting for any type of disclosure that brings us closer. Whether it's your country or mine, or whatever else, the energy needed to pull off a full 0-second stop & reverse maneuver is insane... Like actually insane. Our strongest metals would be ripped apart from the g-forces alone. So, I saw that personally and there are many thousands of others who have too. The technology exists whether you think it's BS or not. But we should all be excited for it 100%. Your homestead DESERVES the technology many UAPs physically require to exist as a phenomenon in the first place.

Tbh this is really the main driving reason I am excited by it all.
Propulsion & energy baby! Everything else is just secondary to that.

Eran - May 26, 2026, 12:59 pm

(May 26, 2026 12:56 PM)Hackers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Right on brudda, totally agree!

The UAP records are 100% related to sustainability, energy uses, etc. So I would expect that you and others will be extremely keen to see the next batch of files. I will personally ping you.

To be honest, this all has way more to do with energy systems than aliens or anything else. If you are worried about energy costs then UAP disclosure is probably the biggest nut you could ever have. We're talking about craft that can physically stop in 0 seconds and completely reverse direction. Imagine what that power looks like in an energy plant to harvest the energy... It completely defies our current systems, so we should all be rooting for any type of disclosure that brings us closer. Whether it's your country or mine, or whatever else, the energy needed to pull off a full 0-second stop & reverse maneuver is insane... Like actually insane. Our strongest metals would be ripped apart from the g-forces alone. So, I saw that personally and there are many thousands of others who have too. The technology exists whether you think it's BS or not. But we should all be excited for it 100%. Your homestead DESERVES the technology many UAPs physically require to exist as a phenomenon in the first place.

To be honest I'm not worried much about anything. I live in Europe and I'm not really emotionally invested in whatever bs is going on around in the world atm. I am fully aware that this shitshow is run by a toxic parasite that has clung on to this reality. I will fuck off somewhere peaceful within the decade and be self sustainable.

Hackers - May 26, 2026, 1:53 pm

(May 26, 2026 12:59 PM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) To be honest I'm not worried much about anything. I live in Europe and I'm not really emotionally invested in whatever bs is going on around in the world atm. I am fully aware that this shitshow is run by a toxic parasite that has clung on to this reality. I will fuck off somewhere peaceful within the decade and be self sustainable.

I hear ya, but I don't think you should be worried. It's good things coming, not bad. I'm personally excited and happy, not fearful or anxious.

The UAP movement has been going on for years, but the recent laws were signed into law by Biden, with Trump piggybacking off of the momentum in Congress that started years ago.

A lot of the data being released has already been previously leaked as well, but lots of new things too.

Just bringing this up because the current news has a toxic parasite talking about it, but this is by no means Trump's doing, and he's relatively not involved. He only got read into the classified programs a couple of weeks ago (AEA & other laws === President only gets read in if they request it. It's not part of normal onboarding for a president, and not part of normal Air Force or other agency classifications. It's above that).

So yeah, fuck the parasites, but this is bigger and better than them, and it's coming regardless. There are a few key players who are willing to commit crimes to leak info should the process stop. Things are in motion and the infighting in US Gov will become more and more apparent as later batches are fought over pre-release. We already have seen this with certain data not coming out in Batch #2, and also a few files from Batch #1 were re-redacted & removed from the site after the initial upload.

In coming months you can expect to see multiple threats from credible people who are willing to disclose more info than they are legally allowed to. It's going to be fun! The US Congress & President need to come to terms with the fact that for decades, they have not been given proper access, and layers and layers of laws make it hard. But they will get there.

So yeah, Trump's a fucking parasite cock, for sure, but he is technically doing something nice for the world right now. I have to applaud the fact that he's willing to risk his life and general autonomy on the topic regardless of stigma, alongside others in the current gov. Obviously I would wish for a better leader in general, and definitely for this... But Trump wasn't the one obscuring the truth for 75 years - the US Gov was... And now we get to see what happens when some are willing to disclose, and others aren't.

In a way... Trump is stupid and negligent enough to waltz into the UAP legacy programs and demand disclosure, with no regard for the implications it has for him personally, or the country.

Specifically, there are those in our government who believe that hiding the truth from the public is justifiable. Other Presidents may have accepted that or come to the same conclusion.

Donnie Trump doesn't appear to have the same hesitation, and that's why he's the perfect idiot for disclosure, if disclosure is what you want. I want full, complete, possibly-catastrophic disclosure, and Trump's the guy for a no-nuance approach here to accomplish just that. But like I said. Where he fails, others will pick up the pieces. Disclosure is coming regardless. From what I understand, there is a sense of urgency to usher in related technologies and holding back the information is no longer justifiable because of energy needs. But that's just a rumor.

Eran - May 26, 2026, 2:43 pm

(May 26, 2026 01:53 PM)Hackers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I hear ya, but I don't think you should be worried. It's good things coming, not bad. I'm personally excited and happy, not fearful or anxious.

The UAP movement has been going on for years, but the recent laws were signed into law by Biden, with Trump piggybacking off of the momentum in Congress that started years ago.

A lot of the data being released has already been previously leaked as well, but lots of new things too.

Just bringing this up because the current news has a toxic parasite talking about it, but this is by no means Trump's doing, and he's relatively not involved. He only got read into the classified programs a couple of weeks ago (AEA & other laws === President only gets read in if they request it. It's not part of normal onboarding for a president, and not part of normal Air Force or other agency classifications. It's above that).

So yeah, fuck the parasites, but this is bigger and better than them, and it's coming regardless. There are a few key players who are willing to commit crimes to leak info should the process stop. Things are in motion and the infighting in US Gov will become more and more apparent as later batches are fought over pre-release. We already have seen this with certain data not coming out in Batch #2, and also a few files from Batch #1 were re-redacted & removed from the site after the initial upload.

In coming months you can expect to see multiple threats from credible people who are willing to disclose more info than they are legally allowed to. It's going to be fun! The US Congress & President need to come to terms with the fact that for decades, they have not been given proper access, and layers and layers of laws make it hard. But they will get there.

So yeah, Trump's a fucking parasite cock, for sure, but he is technically doing something nice for the world right now. I have to applaud the fact that he's willing to risk his life and general autonomy on the topic regardless of stigma, alongside others in the current gov. Obviously I would wish for a better leader in general, and definitely for this... But Trump wasn't the one obscuring the truth for 75 years - the US Gov was... And now we get to see what happens when some are willing to disclose, and others aren't.

In a way... Trump is stupid and negligent enough to waltz into the UAP legacy programs and demand disclosure, with no regard for the implications it has for him personally, or the country.

Specifically, there are those in our government who believe that hiding the truth from the public is justifiable. Other Presidents may have accepted that or come to the same conclusion.

Donnie Trump doesn't appear to have the same hesitation, and that's why he's the perfect idiot for disclosure, if disclosure is what you want. I want full, complete, possibly-catastrophic disclosure, and Trump's the guy for a no-nuance approach here to accomplish just that. But like I said. Where he fails, others will pick up the pieces. Disclosure is coming regardless. From what I understand, there is a sense of urgency to usher in related technologies and holding back the information is no longer justifiable because of energy needs. But that's just a rumor.

Can you give me a tldr?

I'm crossfaded atm and all I see is stuff about US politics which, again, for the 69th time, I don't really care about. EU citizen here.

Hackers - May 26, 2026, 4:37 pm

(May 26, 2026 02:43 PM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Can you give me a tldr?

I'm crossfaded atm and all I see is stuff about US politics which, again, for the 69th time, I don't really care about. EU citizen here.

I tried to give you a TLDR, but I wrote a must-fucking-read instead.

Quick summary:

- AEA / Atomic Energy Act protects the most critical information
 - Even a sitting President has no authority to access or release the information
 - Department of Energy approves all access or disclosure of most sensitive files
 - Current Trump administration is being barred from releasing and accessing some files
 - Current Congress is not being given access or permission to release certain files
 - There is already infighting in the gov over this (AEA laws preventing full disclosure)
- This involves energy technology that completely changes the future of mankind and its reliance on oil & normal engines

- Imagine if the last 75 years of fighting over resource shortages, oil & gas, and reliance on the petrodollar were all just artificial problems that could be solved new energy & propulsion/engine/generator/conductor technology

- What you will see is the people who artificially held back mankind for almost a century potentially, versus the people who want to expose that. Surely you can understand why this is a great risk. AEA laws & DOE approval make it treason to reveal this protected information to other countries. But the real danger is the implication. Mankind has been robbed of true knowledge & science for decades. We have a right to be upset, and to a certain degree, those that hid this from the world have a right to be scared right now. But disclosure is coming :)

Please actually read this:

The AEA, Atomic Energy Act, gives 3 letter agencies the authority to classify materials that are not able to be declassified by any President, or Congress, without the explicit approval of the Department of Energy. If the info relates to the military then it must also be approved by the Department of Defense/War.

This non-political, but real law has prevented Congress and Presidents from disclosing information in the past. Currently, the current President is also facing trouble alongside his full majority Congress also having trouble.

Right now our government has to wrestle control from the DOE, and DOD agencies to disclose all information. The groups protected by the AEA are our research programs, alongside classified contracts with private companies such as Lockheed (for ex, they disclosed $1B in 1 classified project last year with DOD).

This is referred to as the legacy program - the private companies who do contract work with DOE & DOD on the AEA-protected projects.

So, the reason it's not political, and why this isn't really about aliens all boils down to those very specific facts. The UAP disclosure movement specifically requires an administration, like the current Trump Presidency & his Congress, to literally fight for control & release of classified materials that they are not authorized to release, unless DOE approves it.

This is why there is a lot at risk. If the DOE does not agree to release certain records, then thankfully the Trump administration and some of its Congress members and a few key individuals are willing to risk their careers in order to release information without AEA-legal approval to do so.

This is bigger than Snowden and the NSA. Many billions of dollars have been spent on these programs without full oversight or transparency, and the existing laws allow these programs to act with complete autonomy, treating the UAP programs & information as the most sensitive, classified materials. If there are national secrets worth killing for, well then these are international secrets - or perhaps we can call them galactic, or universal secrets.

waddon - May 26, 2026, 11:15 pm

it's actually shilling when i first read about it

Hackers - May 27, 2026, 6:08 am

(May 26, 2026 11:15 PM)waddon Wrote: CITE it's actually shilling when i first read about it
There are a lot of shills online trying to spread different theories. Did you mean shilling, or chilling?