Thread: Who reports posts these days?

jcole - May 13, 2026, 4:00 pm

Who is the mini-mod around here that is reporting my posts? I am reaching out to the community and staff to understand the reasoning behind this especially since I aim to maintain high credibility and professional standards within the marketplace. I understand this is considered grave digging.

My Stance

As someone who has completed 500+ contracts and actively works to improve the site's UI/UX to better distinguish between popularity and marketplace credibility, I take all reports against my account seriously.

My post was a factual observation regarding market value and history.

I have a 0% warning level and a strong reputation within the community.

I've reported posts throughout the forum when there was a need for it. Someone is targeting me in Currency Exchange and reporting my posts. This has been going on for months now.

Our boy Roger has moved on.

Got himself a girl and a taste for the fancy beer.

RIP Raj </3

I very rarely report posts.

RIP my mentor abilities :(

We get between 20-40 reports a day. It's not just one member. There's actually a lot of members who report posts. Most of the time they are accurate. Sometimes they aren't. Some things are more of a gray area like gravedigging, technically against the rules. but we don't really enforce it. Normally the most we do is close the thread if it's a dead one.

I still report posts, always have and probably always will, might even just report your OP for fun..

Sadly I cannot see screenshots due to imgur woo.

That's like "diet" gravedigging. Your reply was completely relevant to where we are today, and if I'm not mistaken the user that you replied to there is still active currently anyway. I demand that the traitors identity be released immediately so that we may beat them with tube socks containing bars of soap.

People do strange things..

I report random violations of someone peddling open source shit in the RAT section, thats about it.

Yin Yang - May 14, 2026, 6:19 am

By the time I get to it, it's already reported ?

?inimalist - May 14, 2026, 10:46 am

Yes, I used to submit some reports for spam or wrong sections, but I got warned for no reason, so I stopped doing it.
