

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Email creation

Green_Staid - May 19, 2026, 6:29 am

Hi,

Looking to create emails. A lot of these providers require phone verification.

How do people bypass phone verifications? I know I can use an sms provider but these cost .2c-.40c per number. This is too much for what I want to do.

How do people sell email accounts for .2c-$3 each when it costs that much to make an email account via sms provider? Why would I not just buy emails for these prices when it costs time + same amount of money to make them manually. How are they selling emails for this cheaply?

I don't really care what email provider, I want to make a lot of email accounts, but most require phone verification.

I'm not looking to sell these email accounts. I want a lot of emails for personal usage.

Also, a few websites I've found that allow to create email without number somehow block me when it's my first time making an account with them. Is this due to being in a different country? Do I need create with a proxy with IP in that country? Then, that costs money via proxy.

Why is it so hard to create a lot of emails these days?

DramaKing - May 19, 2026, 6:38 am

(May 19, 2026 06:29 AM)Green_Staid Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How do people sell email accounts for .2c-$3 each when it costs that much to make an email account via sms provider? Why would I not just buy emails for these prices when it costs time + same amount of money to make them manually. How are they selling emails for this cheaply?

The answer, almost certainly, is old inventory. SMS verification is rather new.

(May 19, 2026 06:29 AM)Green_Staid Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why is it so hard to create a lot of emails these days?

Email providers understandably don't want people to create hundreds of thousands of accounts for sale or not use like anybody else.