Thread: Is it possible to extract LoRAs \(for AI image generation\) from websites?

Abcormal19 - May 27, 2026, 8:28 pm

Hello, I'm a novice hacker, but a budding AI artist, who has generated AI art for some months now.

I've seen that there are many LoRAs on sites like TensorArt that either have their download button disabled, or require money to unlock.

Would it be possible to extract such LoRAs from these websites? And if so, how would one go about it?

Any insight from more experienced hackers would be greatly appreciated.

Is the problem that right-clicking is disabled or that the paywall blocks you from accessing a link without paying?

Well, there are two types of this situation.

1. The download button is disabled
2. The LoRA link can only be accessed once a certain fee (e.g. $20) is spent.

I could easily pay the fee of course - I'm not that poor. The main problem here is the first type, the disabled download button.

You missed my point. Whatever these LoRAs are, they must be shown. Do you need a high-res version that is only accessible by clicking on this button?

I'm unable to post links at the moment, but you can find them on TensorArt under these names:

1. Lisa Simpson V4 ultimate
2. The Powerpuff Girls _v3 (left brain)
3. The Powerpuff Girls _v3 (right brain)

The only way I can download these LoRA models is by clicking the Download button, but as you'll be able to see, they're either undownloadable (download button greyed out) or behind a paywall ("unlock for $20"). Of course, it is possible to generate using them on the site itself, but I'd like to have them just in case the site goes down.

I didn't see that button, but depending on your browser, you can right-click on the image and choose 'Save Image As'.

I think you'd need to be logged into the site to see that button. Oh, well. Thanks anyway.
