Just watched this movie last night. It's finally available for streaming on Amazon Video and Apple TV, and a few others. Apple TV does have the unrated version. I was blown away by how well done this movie was. I had heard a lot about it and thought maybe it was all hype. No, I was wrong. This movie was phenomenal. Especially considering the budget being below $1 million. Main character is in love with a girl, makes a wish that she loves him more than anything and it comes true. With awful side effects. I don't want to say too much more, I do hope someone reads this and gives this movie a watch so I have someone to discuss this with. I would say 9.9/10. The only thing keeping it from being 10/10 is I didn't find the plot original enough. I felt like it's been done a few times.

I honestly loved it myself, very good and keeps you attached to the screen.

Loved the acting, the script and the thrill/suspense the first sound/jumpscare really got to me lol

Is the budget indeed below $1 million ? That's crazy.

The official budget was $750,000 and they earn more than $374.4 million.

About the movie, you have to watch on theaters for better sound experience. For me the movie is 10/10.

No streaming services, or even the physical version coming out July 14th, have the "unrated" version.

Prime said it was, but it is not.

Apparently the only difference is the car scene near the end of the movie (iykyk) is a bit more graphic.

Hope to see it one day either way.

I had to look it up. Apparently when Apple first listed the movie they listed it as unrated which caused a lot of confusion. They since fixed this.

I watched this movie this past weekend, and I have been wanting to see it since I saw the trailer months ago. I must say, it did not disappoint! Wow, Obsession doesn't even start to describe that poor girl lol. Awesome modern horror flick imo. I literally laughed out load when the wads of cash started falling from the sky lol.
