Do you have any proof about that? Also are you sure it was not an impersonator?

I'm sorry for that, but please expose him so he doesn't scam other people.

Updated the op, check it out

I still need this, we need a middleman if you cant go first and start the contract

Where else can I post the scam without getting banned ? I understand it wasnt under hf contract but people still need to see this. He hasnt been online here since I sent him the eth. Im a bit disappointed, he didnt strike me as someone that would do that.

Mastercarder You have a response to this?

Edit - Already got scammed for this - Proof User: Mastercard

Did you use an official HF contract? Do you have any messages on site that you can provide while The Brotherhood leadership investigate this?

Please provide any information you have. On site information is credible, and anything off site is going to be more difficult to verify legitimacy.

Thank you I will look into this.

Edmond Dantes - July 17, 2026, 9:56 am

I doubt Mastercarder would do that. Man is really legit and don't have a reason to scam you for lunch money.

jcole - July 17, 2026, 10:06 am

I told Mastercarder to refund you the exact amount that you sent to his wallet. There seems to be a misunderstanding about this entire situation. Mastercarder has been at the hospital dealing with a family situation.

What is your ETH wallet address that you would like funds sent back to? He will refund and we will move on from this.

signed0 - July 17, 2026, 11:31 am why is it always a hospital

jcole - July 17, 2026, 6:35 pm

ETH (0.02592588) has been refunded to address provided by OP. Mastercarder will reimburse me the ETH amount when he is home from the hospital dealing with family affairs.

Thank you for your patience.

Next time both of you need to use the HF contract system. The contract system was implemented to protect buyers and sellers in this community.

D_MuLa - July 17, 2026, 6:46 pm

I've been reimbursed, everything resolved.

Mastercarder - July 17, 2026, 11:44 pm

I fully understand why the buyer was concerned after not hearing from me, and I accept that I should have communicated sooner.

That said, I also feel the situation escalated far too quickly. Throughout our conversation there were multiple occasions where I waited several hours for replies from the buyer myself, which I completely understood because people have jobs, sleep, and live in different time zones.

When I didn't respond for around a day due to an unexpected personal emergency combined with the Australia/US time difference, a scam report was opened before I had any realistic opportunity to explain what had happened or resolve the matter.

The buyer has now been refunded in full. There was never any intention to scam or keep anyone's money. This was a communication failure during an unforeseen situation, and I accept responsibility for that. I will be reimbursing jcole right now as I've finally gotten time for myself. Thank you also jcole much appreciated ?

You wanna see a photo of my girlfriend on a hospital bed?
Her wrist band with yesterday's date and time?
Why is it always unnecessary people with unnecessary comments.

Hope your family is safe and healthy and you don't need to attend a hospital anytime soon.

Thanks bro. Much appreciated.

Yeah just got time to respond. I have no intention whatsoever to scam $50. I'm hosting giveaways to give back to the community. It makes no sense as to why I need to run with $50.

I even told jcole I will refund him double to prove a point lol. Not nice my name got tarnished that quick over $50.

But I appreciate everybody who helped with the situation.
