Bro, when I was a kid, I never thought about making money until I turned 18. I was just talking to girls at school and playing OG Fortnite, living life. Now I'm an adult I want to stay busy, have my own business, and take care of my family.

The kids:

"Oh, I'm going to be rich, get laid, and be better than everybody else. I don't even know what the IRS means."

Buddy, you're like 13 years old you don't need to worry about that stress. I think those motivation videos are for older people who are actually struggling ?

TB12 - July 27, 2026, 7:07 am

To be fair I think most people think he's a complete fucking idiot. Just a select few dumbasses that actually follow him

DramaKing - July 27, 2026, 8:04 am

Cringe, yes, but those adolescents playing at being "influencers" are still less of a joke than my horribly spoiled cousin who spent his childhood addicted to videogames and and know just repeats things he learned on the Internet about socialism, geopolitics, and whatever like he has real life experience. I mean, in some countries like the DRC, there are child miners younger than the subjects of that video. That's beyond cringe.

I respect kids having dreams, and I respect them being honest about wanting to retire their mom and dad. But I'm talking about kids who are flexing come on, man. Rich people don't flex like that. The guy who owned Apple didn't flex; I believe he even wore the same outfit most of the time lol.

I don't think those kids understand that the legal age to start a business is 18+, and it can ruin their lives because it comes with risks for example, lawsuits. You need to have common sense. Your cousin shouldn't worry about what other people are doing he should just be himself.

Had to stop speaking with an old HF member because he was way too far up Tate's ass, and thought he knew everything, despite still being single, broke and living with family. I can't abide by people that preach or promote a certain type of lifestyle, yet their own is the polar opposite, and that's what he seems to attract; posers and nobodies who get inspired by others, but simply do not have the wherewithall to actually do things.

Yeah, there's nothing wrong with making money but if you're too busy being up someone else's ass, you won't get anywhere lol. Nobody's going to save you.

For sure, I applaud anyone making money and changing their situations, but when your situation hasn't changed for years and you're still talking about the same old stuff and how everyone else is wrong, then you might be retarded lol (not you ofc, the morons we refer to)

Like the Bible says, this world is going to give you trouble and these morons are an example of that trouble lol.

I just really feel like self-awareness as a whole is going out the window, people living delusions on a grander scale becomes the new norm more and more with each passing day!

Guys a top weirdo and anyone who likes him is deluded.

Mastercarder - July 27, 2026, 6:49 pm

It's amazing how much one can achieve when not listening to a second of any so called influencer.

All they are influencing is a dumbed down society.
Whether it's Andrew Tate or any other wanker.

Undead - July 27, 2026, 10:27 pm

Tate is a agent and a complete fake. Even the videos of him being arrested are fake along with everything else. His purpose is to to push the gender war with so called "toxic masculinity".

I had a nine year old student talking about how to be a billionaire and saying inappropriate stuff. I did like the kid though despite the fact he was kind of disrupting the online class. I was teaching him reading and writing but I was getting concerned.

Turned out it was all because his best friend's father was telling him all this stuff in anger about his divorce. Then that kid was passing inappropriate stuff on to my student.

I didn't have a problem with the billionaire stuff though and I directed one lesson towards it for him.

Kids supporting wrong people, what a surprise ?

I didn't have a problem with the billionaire stuff though and I directed one lesson towards it for him. If he wants to become a billionaire, he needs to learn math and reading. Money is all about words and numbers you have to understand both.

Also, try this it might sound like a bad idea: give him $10 or $20 and let him try to invest it into something bigger, like reselling. Let him learn by doing. That experience will show him how hard it is to run a business and teach him a real lesson becoming a billionaire isn't easy.

He'll probably get frustrated, and that's normal. It means he's learning.

Trust me, just try it. Watch him struggle a bit, and he might start to change and focus more on school.

And for you, act like the IRS your job is to teach him how bills and taxes work. Take a portion of the money he earns so he understands that in the real world, you don't keep everything you make.

This will help develop his mindset and make him understand how hard the real world is. When he grows up and reaches 18+, the legal age to start a business, he'll realize it's not easy. He'll learn to work harder and smarter because of that experience.
