I'm guessing it's getting more common for rogue federal agents to steal cryptocurrency. Should anyone ever be trusted with seized crypto? They don't seem to have the highest standards for crypto security.

I mean it's happened in the past several times even back in the day with silk road.

Huh, that $1m eventually made its way to Suilend on Sui.

FBI agent has good taste really tempting, I don't think they don't earn enough, or they are now just have higher standards.

Not surprising when there could be little oversight about anything at that level. Look how much rampant fraud is going on with US tax dollars? Of course people are naturally going to start thinking about going rogue when you can't hardly make it in this world solely on hard work and integrity.

If he doesn't do it, someone else eventually will.

What happens with most seized crypto? Does it just go into the government wallets at the end of the day?

Only caught cause he snitched on himself, unless I read that wrong? That's crazy Leonardo really fucked them up with catch me if you can. Now it's every man for himself, especially after wolf of Wall Street.

Now think of the DEA doing raids on the border for cartel cash. Crypto has a public ledger, cash is untraceable.

I'm sure agents have pocketed millions from drug cartels.

Wow! this is crazy
