

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How to find someone from phone number. mashedpotatoes - August 12, 2026, 3:35 am

Hi, I have recently come across a scammer who hacks peoples accounts with phishing links and scams 100s to thousands of dollars with a "crypto investment" tactic. I know their number, which starts with +64 27 which I think originates in my country (NZ) but they claimed they were in Miami. Is there any way I can find out who it is with this number. They also have a telegram, and a TikTok. The name is Shayla Crawford and obviously a fake name using a real persons photos/videos. I cannot find anyone named Shayla Crawford who is a professional crypto trader. I have reverse searched the images and still unable to find anything. She offers a 15k payout if you invest 300, you can invest as much as you like with a 300 minimum. For you people that are thinking " That's their fault for being dumb and not learning about scams. " She has real people vouching for her, multiple screenshots and videos. I messaged one of the people who recorded a video, she told me that "Shayla" told her to record the video as a vouch and send it to her. This was before any money was sent (and never was). Then she will hack into their socials and post up the videos, use AI to make photos of them in new cars/houses. She does everything through trustworthy apps until it comes to the phishing link at the end of the convo where you can "transfer the funds". The only reason I didn't get scammed is because I checked the link. They have been doing this for months now, and they're really good at gaining peoples trust. I would like to stop this, and if any hackers would like to help it would make a big difference. ??

DramaKing - August 12, 2026, 4:15 am

The number is probably VOIP. A scammer wouldn't use a landline.

Binance - August 12, 2026, 4:51 am

Yes there is an entire cyber military of hackers waiting to do pro-bono anti-scam work as dictated by potential scam victims from random threads in forums online.

You got it.

PAW PATROL ENGAGE.