Thread: The perfect Breakfast?

Quintus Fabius Maximus - August 15, 2026, 3:40 pm

Basically, what would be the perfect breakfast for you? For me, it would have to be a full English breakfast, but with all of the following, which is AI-generated, but I could not find anything online that included it all:

Bacon, fried eggs, hash browns, homemade chips/fries, sausages, fried bread, mushrooms, tomatoes, beans, and black pudding.

Brioche cinnamon bread to make the French toast, maple beef sausage, 3 eggs over hard, and a nice glass of orange juice.

What breakfast was that man?

CyberXero - August 15, 2026, 5:05 pm

She would bring me sushi, she would also cook up a cottage pie early in the morning, as well as mince with eggs on toast, creamy mushroom, she gave me the works and I miss it so much.

cryptojack - August 15, 2026, 6:06 pm

Why did you have to make this post?

My mouth is watering from seeing the plate.

Hunger. ??? Nom nom nom.

Two over-easy eggs fried in oil and butter, two slices of buttered toast, a few strips of thoroughly cooked thick-cut bacon, hash browns, and an ice-cold can of Diet Pepsi.

CyberXero - August 15, 2026, 6:48 pm

Black pudding, my grandfather use to have that all the time, fried up blood right, looks like a sausage meat?

Undead - August 15, 2026, 8:04 pm

That's a breakfast fit for a English King.

Aqzxk - August 15, 2026, 8:22 pm

I had a good one this morning at a buffet. Waffles, sausage, eggs with some sausage gravy, sausages, some fried shrimp, apple bread pudding. But honestly it doesn't beat the one you showed. That looks bomb, yo.

I'm pretty straight forward; I enjoy steak and eggs above all else. It's not something I have as often as I'd like so when I do, I really enjoy it.

I do really enjoy your typical bacon and eggs though, too.

For me it would be a mix of complex carbs and protein.

2 Eggs. 2 slices of bread with Peanut Butter. Avocado or and Apple on the side sometimes.

This reminded me that my late husband would cook me that black pudding because he worried about my iron levels.

I've never thought to buy it for myself until now.

I don't like baked beans in that sauce but everything else in the fake photo is yum. I prefer poached egg to any other kind of egg.

CyberXero - August 16, 2026, 1:24 pm

I really gotta try out black pudding one-day while my grandfather is still alive, get him to make me some

FONZIE - August 17, 2026, 8:19 am

Isn't it a bit heavy to have meat for breakfast in the morning? Jumping out of bed, brushing the teeth, and then sit down to a big plate, the size of a trashcan lid, filled with meat.

I usually eat a small yoghurt and two boiled eggs.

Just egg, roasts, and tea is enough for me. 4 poached eggs.

Protein pancakes cus cutting

RiveR29 - August 30, 2026, 9:12 pm

imma hop on here to say, that at this point. I am lucky if I get a coffee, cigarette and 1mg of ibuprofen.

Plus if I am extra lucky ill get a Aussie lemonade monster with all that.

So yeah, okay but the fact is that I have always been bad at eating breakfast. I wake up everyday at 0620 and I have to be at work at 0700.

So no time to eat anything. I get to my car at around 0630 and start the drive to work.

But I always fix that by lunch. I go to this one buffet style lunch place that costs me 10.90€ and I get to eat what ever is on the table at that time.

And they pretty much never make bad food. There is only maybe like 2 different things that I simply can not eat at all.

And the only things are Pasta Carbonara. (Just because I had to survive my mandatory 1 year military service with that shait)

But also anything with any kind of mushrooms. (They give me the runs). So yeah that's about it.

Boiled or scrambled eggs with a protein shake. 10/10

Ryan Carter - September 2, 2026, 8:57 am

My perfect breakfast would be pancakes with fresh berries and coffee. I like a full English breakfast too, but that combination would probably be a little too heavy for me in the morning. ?
