I would have to try them all to give a proper answer, and of course I haven't. Haven't had a problem with ShockVPN, however. Has what you need for hosting unlike many others that have faced legal pressure.

ProtonVPN allows partial port forwarding. Check if that works for you as it's one of the best VPNs for privacy.

I think what people do is register new account every month and redeem their $1 for first month offer that they give to new accounts.

False. This would only work until you disconnect, your port mapping is gone.

My opinion is that MullVad was forced to end portforwarding because abuse was practically a feature.
