

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Any clippers or influencers here? Wanting to find more UGC creators

SpiritualDose - September 25, 2026, 7:14 am

What's up HF.

This doesn't really fall into the marketplace of social media just because this isn't an SMM, or botting etc.

Basically, I run a digital community that somewhat has a SaaS feel to it for finding hidden clearance deals.

Have you ever seen videos of people finding items from Home Depot for a penny? This is what I do.

The ability to go viral on social media with these kinds of content is INSANE, and I have all the data and research, from scripts, music that works, my own film etc.

I'm trying to build out a team of content creators and pay out 50% commission as Monthly recurring revenue.

If you're WILLING? I will train you. This is EASY money. 1 post a day lol.

Admins if this isn't allowed, let me know and I apologize in advanced.

SUI-3183372 - September 25, 2026, 8:59 am

Clipping is powerful and has a lot of attention behind it right now.

Part of my job is building internal AI tooling for teams, and I've been working with marketing teams a lot lately. A clipping framework is something that I've had a lot of demand for, and is something I've built out over the last few months.

Using my framework, you'll feed the system a proper brief about what your brand is, how you want to present yourself, who your audience is, etc, essentially you spend a bit of time calibrating what you want your outputs to look like. Once you're honed in there, it's simple: You feed raw video into the framework. It will identify the impactful moments of your video, it'll clip around them, and it'll determine how to order these clips and fit them together in the most impactful manner possible, while staying conscious of your brand, your audience, and what lands well with your audience. It'll create a transcript and add subtitles. It'll add transitions, intro clips, outro clips, watermarks, branding, etc.

At this point I simply upload a video to a bot on Telegram or Slack and I'll have a clip back within 2-5 minutes depending on length of the raw video and the length of the requested clip.

SpiritualDose - September 25, 2026, 10:20 am

(Sep 25, 2026 08:59 AM)SUI-3183372 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Clipping is powerful and has a lot of attention behind it right now.

Part of my job is building internal AI tooling for teams, and I've been working with marketing teams a lot lately. A clipping framework is something that I've had a lot of demand for, and is something

I've built out over the last few months.

Using my framework, you'll feed the system a proper brief about what your brand is, how you want to present yourself, who your audience is, etc, essentially you spend a bit of time calibrating what you want your outputs to look like. Once you're honed in there, it's simple: You feed raw video into the framework. It will identify the impactful moments of your video, it'll clip around them, and it'll determine how to order these clips and fit them together in the most impactful manner possible, while staying conscious of your brand, your audience, and what lands well with your audience. It'll create a transcript and add subtitles. It'll add transitions, intro clips, outro clips, watermarks, branding, etc.

At this point I simply upload a video to a bot on Telegram or Slack and I'll have a clip back within 2-5 minutes depending on length of the raw video and the length of the requested clip.

I'd be interested in this, but I'd also need best practices on how I can scale this myself then. I'd need to be posting these on as MANY US accounts as I possibly can for scale.

It would take 30 days of any of these fresh accounts to even touch something with "views" but it's possible.

I've built my own accounts organically in 45 days and have done more than 1.8m impressions. I just need to scale this and get as many other US creators posting as I possibly can.

That, is my ideal versus your style campaign (at least at this moment)