Thread: Death of Gypsy Rose Blanchard's Ken Urker Cannot Rule Out' Foul Play in Death Yet

Authorities in Louisiana say Ken Urker, partner of Gypsy Rose Blanchard, was found dead inside his Raceland home after days of visible emotional distress. Deputies entered the residence during a Thursday evening wellness check and discovered Urker lying on his bed, already cold, with the scene indicating he had been dead for an extended period of time.

Investigators stated that there is currently no proof of foul play, but they also made it clear that foul play cannot be ruled out yet. The death investigation remains active.

The initial report describes a stark environment inside the home. Syringes and a spoon were found near a brown powdery substance in the bathroom. On the nightstand beside the bed, deputies found another syringe, a holstered handgun, and two shot glasses. Nothing in the home suggested a struggle, but the presence of paraphernalia raised immediate concern.

The man who helped locate Urker told deputies that he and his wife had attended church with him the night before. Urker had spoken openly about feeling depressed and upset. Later, he posted a silent TikTok video of himself driving, saying nothing, just broadcasting a mood that unsettled those who knew him. When he failed to show up for work, they decided to check on him.

Blanchard, who shares a daughter with Urker, told People magazine she was in disbelief. He died on his 34th birthday. She said she had screamed until her throat burned.

Urker and Blanchard met through a prison pen pal program while she was serving time for her role in the 2015 killing of her mother, Claudine Dee Dee Blanchard. The case drew national attention and inspired multiple documentaries and dramatizations. Their relationship, including a brief separation and reconciliation, unfolded under relentless public scrutiny.

Blanchard said Urker endured severe online harassment throughout their relationship, describing the cruelty directed at him as something no person should have to face. She believes the constant barrage of criticism had a profound impact on him. She said she wants their daughter to grow up knowing how deeply her father loved her and who he truly was beyond the noise of strangers online.

What's so suspicious the man's sister Autumn can't stand Gypsy Rose and had a YouTube channel where she performed a long poem about what a liar Gypsy Rose is and then another video where she cries about how Gypsy Rose isn't going to do the same thing to Autumn's brother that she did to her mother DeDe ie...murder.

Then this dude dies at age 34 of an overdose and Gypsy Rose says they were engaged and so in love when he died, but his sister Autumn said they weren't together and had been broken up for a month, and that this man was dissing Gypsy Rose last time she spoke to him.

And Gypsy Rose says he killed himself because of cyberbullying for having met her as prison pen pal.
