To begin with do anything you can. Get your CV out there and make money. You can't make money until you have money.

Then lower your living costs, giving you a higher % on what you can invest into projects or ways of getting you out of the job.

DO NOT - Tell the employer this is only temporary - Your looking to rise within their business

DO NOT - Waste your last bit of money with no income on a scheme or plan when you can't afford to run it.

Once you got 30% cost of living and 70% to invest in yourself then start looking.

I have done some shit jobs in the past but I wouldn't be where I am today if I just took the last of my money or no money at all and looked for a quick fix.

Spend a few month growing you income, lowering costs .. investing into ideas until they are paying more than your shit job pays you at still the same 30/70 value.. then you can keep growing.
