

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Violation of multinational company

Darwkz - October 10, 2026, 11:01 pm

Hello, I need advice. There's a multinational company called Santillana, and I just managed to hack into and download databases from their interface containing around 10 million records of minors. The information it contains is: date of birth, country, full name, role, phone number or email address. What do you think I can do with this? It contains information from Brazil, Mexico, and Colombia. United States, Canada, Dominica, among others

Kip_Merrygold - October 11, 2026, 3:49 am

(Oct 10, 2026 11:01 PM)Darwkz Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hello, I need advice. There's a multinational company called Santillana, and I just managed to hack into and download databases from their interface containing around 10 million records of minors. The information it contains is: date of birth, country, full name, role, phone number or email address. What do you think I can do with this? It contains information from Brazil, Mexico, and Colombia. United States, Canada, Dominica, among others
Do no harmful leak of this information. Call Interpol or FBI say sorry I guess. -Kip

Lefty - October 11, 2026, 4:02 am

Minors? Contact the company and tell them the issue. Don't leave it open for others

DramaKing - October 11, 2026, 4:56 am

Responsible disclosure is better than posting a breach online for kicks and giggles. If you think that you're going to sell it, you came to the wrong place. Don't say anything about exploiting the website, but they'll likely know.

Bastille - October 11, 2026, 5:13 am

By the way : <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5981318>

Quote:Do not create threads to brag about internet crimes.

jcole - October 11, 2026, 5:15 am

Good luck with this. Not sure of your success of monetizing this info here.

7 - October 11, 2026, 9:02 pm

Its actually okey to discuss this he is not leaking this information. Report it and hand it in. Safest bet