Thread: When Do You Mostly Listen To Music?

DemonAsylum - October 12, 2026, 12:01 am

You can listen to music during just about any time and while doing just about anything. Obviously there are bound to be times or during certain activities that you're listening to music most though. I want to know what that is for you. The largest amount of time that I spend listening to music is while on my PC and whether I'm doing work, puttering online, playing OSRS, or whatever else. I of course listen to music during other times and while doing other things, but it's not nearly as much as while on my PC. To be fair though a big part of that is obviously due to the amount of time that I spend on my PC.

This thread title is giving me a seizure.

I primarily listen to music on my way to work to pump me up, or sometimes at the gym. I much prefer podcasts lately, Murder in America has been a go-to of mine lately and I find myself listening to music on the way to work and podcasts on the way home.

LMAO, check it now. I simplified it so no more seizures for you hopefully. Music when driving somewhere or working out is the usual for me as well. I've enjoyed some podcasts before while doing certain things, but it's been a while since I've been into any.

It's actually all day every day until I play a certain game that requires 100% focus or when I watch anime or movies.

It's nice to listen to music while working.

Literally all the time lol. I'm annoyed when I can't listen to my own music when I'm at work.

Mostly listen to music when I first get home from work to unwind.

Podcast usually on the drive home but sometimes even put the radio on still like an oldie.

Mostly in the GYM and while coding
