Thread: Is it just me, or does it feel like we're already at World War III

Sift - October 12, 2026, 2:24 am

Let's be real for a second—turning on the news lately is just exhausting.

Every time you look at the headlines, it feels like another flashpoint is blowing up. Between the massive conflicts dragging on, escalating proxy wars, and superpowers lining up on opposite sides, it's hard not to shake the feeling that the whole globe is sitting on a tinderbox. It doesn't even feel like separate regional issues anymore; everything is so deeply interconnected that it genuinely feels like we are on the precipice of World War III.

What scares me the most is how numb everyone seems to be getting to it.

People are just going about their daily lives while the background radiation of the world is absolute chaos.

How are you guys processing all of this?

Do you feel like things are actually spiraling out of control globally, or is modern media just amplifying every single threat to keep us in a constant state of panic?

Yes already there mate. But its proxy warfare and media manipulation. The biggest war is not between countries its between the gov and the people. You not noticed how everything is changing, you no longer have rights.

World war 3 won't happen officially, because if it happens, nukes must be dropped. So instead, everyone will just keep making threats, have a conflict here and there and thats it. The media, media owners and the politicians these owners are backing are the true enemy.

Humanities hunger for power and conflict is saddest part of being human but it won't ever change been like this since beginning of time.

So much tension in the world right now it's pretty much started with proxy and cyber wars.

WW3 began when all these attacks happened around the world. I recall seeing something about Russia trying to cyber attack everyone recently too which I would say is part of it all.

We ain't there yet, to assign a W.W title to something it must have more than a single country/superpower..

US vs Anyone (isn't ww3)

US & ALLY vs Anyone (isn't ww3)

US + Ally vs Multiple Countries (WW3)
