I can see why Norway would be your choice for me it isn't due to where I come from I've been to Norway, Denmark, Sweden but to be honest if you lived in a Nordic country since childhood they wouldn't hold as special place like other countries with different landscapes and culture.

I'd love to visit Montenegro someday. For me, Italy is definitely up there. The scenery, food and overall vibe are hard to beat. But Dordrecht was also beautiful.

Brazil to me was much more beautiful than I thought when I was there for a week

I never left the country, but would love to see Japan in real life.

I love watching the Japan walk videos where the person is just walking around.

You need to get that traveling hat on and leave the comfort zone.

Sorry to hear that feels like a shitty situation to deal with.

I've never left the USA. I would like to go visit Croatia and some South American countries, I know they are poor but some pictures I have seen are very beautiful.

It looks like an incredible place to vacation. I looked into it years ago and at the time a whole month there was comparable to what you would pay a week here.
