Thread: What is the most valuable thing in your life?

What do you value the most in your life at this moment?

When people ask this, the usual answers are family, health, or financial security, and those are obviously foundational. But lately, I've been thinking about it more in terms of day-to-day agency and how we actually spend our time.

For me right now, what I value the most is autonomy and keeping things simple. Having the freedom to set my own schedule, work on things that genuinely interest me, and avoid all the unnecessary friction, corporate noise, and endless subscription traps that tend to bog life down. There is an immense amount of peace in just being able to build things that work, keep your space uncluttered, and call the shots on how your hours are spent.

Coupled with that is the freedom of mobility—just having the flexibility to pack up, live somewhere completely new for a few months, experience a totally different rhythm of life, and still keep things moving forward without being anchored to one spot.

Curious to hear how others see it right now. What are you prioritizing at this point in your life, and has that changed for you over the last few years?

I would say at this point.
My field setup that I run during firing practice.

My complete setup in a list.

- Agilite KF-Zero.
- Pincer™ Placard Multi-Caliber Triple Mag Pouch
- Six Pack™ Hanger Pouch
- 2x PGD LW SA Lightweight hard armor NIJ level III+
- Micro MAP™ Back Panel
- Agilite Magnetix™ Battle Belt (With)
- Pincer™ Single Multi-Caliber Mag Pouch
- Agilite General Purpose Pouch
- Pincer™ Pistol Double Pouch

- MD2™ Compact Trauma Kit | IFAK
- Mag-Release Dump Pouch

Totaling somewhere around
2 044$

Yea that doesn't include the weapons. But I do own a couple.
But damn do I love the kit to bits, I feel like this is the first kit that ever fitted me perfectly.
And as a point man I feel like it protects me just enough that I feel safe without compromising on ergonomics and lightness.

What line of work are you in?

I work in security and I also work as a trainer in private sector. We are contracted by the government to train soldiers and voluntary fighters.
So we run different training types. Entry, Hostage rescue, Terror prevention etc. I usually work as an OPFOR and I find it fun.
