Thread: What Has Become Too Expensive for What It Is?

Michael - October 13, 2026, 12:37 am

Prices are going up, and inflation is rising, what has become too expensive?
Some stuff are everyday use, but other things are just too expensive.

Ah like that.
Have they become so expensive?

Have they become so expensive?Yup. The stores sometimes knock 30 or 40% off, but I remember when a case of pop would go for WAY less. Maybe around $10 or $20. Not $40...

A loaf of bread. I remember that shit being like 50 pence. For the same thing its like £2 thats four times for the same stuff.

It just seems, sometimes stores just make their prices higher 'just because they can'.

Bread prices went crazy indeed.
A lot of mark up on this though.

Most definitely.

Stores know they can sometimes ask premium prices for this.

I swear, the times I seen you type about Chipotle is crazy.

But these fast food chains been raising their prices.

I'll go with chocolate. I understand why it's expensive, considering the entire production process, but at the end of the day, the price still feels ridiculously high for something that's just chocolate.
