Thread: Do you believe people deserve a second chance after making a mistake?

Yanix - October 13, 2026, 5:33 am

I personally believe everyone deserves a second chance, but it really depends on what they did and how they handle things afterward.

We all make mistakes and sometimes it takes messing up to realize what we've done wrong. I'm willing to forgive someone if I can see they're genuinely sorry and making an effort to change.

But giving someone another chance doesn't mean I'll just forget what happened or let them keep making the same mistake over and over again. At some point, you have to know when enough is enough.

Sift - October 13, 2026, 5:34 am

I think it depends on what they did but usually yes second chance should be given people make mistakes.

Yep, everyone makes mistakes and I believe people deserve a second chance. But it also depends on what they did and whether they're genuinely willing to change and learn from their mistakes.

Exactly but some people don't really change.

Some people never really change, no matter how many chances you give them. I guess that's why we should look at their actions rather than just believe their promises.

Sure but only if they didn't kill anyone

?ystem - October 13, 2026, 9:48 am

I believe everyone deserves a second chance. Lord knows I wouldn't be where I am or even who I am today if I weren't given one. But it's not really an immediate thing, like someone just got done throwing Molotov cocktails through an orphanage's windows and suddenly has a supposed "change of heart", as children are crisping up, and I give them the Buddy Jesus look, absolutely not.

Hern - October 13, 2026, 9:54 am

I usually allow one extra chance but after that it is me being the fool then

Charlie Sheen - October 13, 2026, 3:55 pm

I do. I screwed up plenty of times and I have learned from most of my mistakes. I know others that I have given a second chance and they appreciated it and didn't let me down.

We all make mistakes and nobody is perfect. What matters most is learning from those mistakes and doing better next time. Sometimes giving someone a second chance can really make a difference.

I have some people that I bring up there turnaround to them all the time and how proud I am that they were able to. Some people I gave up on and they ended up turning their lives around and I couldn't be more happy to be wrong.

Sometimes people surprise us in the best possible way. It's always nice to see someone turn their life around, especially when you thought they never would.

Humanity dictates we do, since humans make mistakes and we tend to give and want second chances.

Yeah, nobody is perfect and we all make mistakes at some point in our lives. Everyone deserves a chance to learn, grow and become a better person, as long as they're willing to make a change.

Depends on what it is and the severity

It really depends on how serious the mistake was. Some things are easier to forgive than others and not everyone deserves a second chance, especially if they keep making the same mistakes.

Laughing Man - October 14, 2026, 6:47 am

Also depends some thing can find forgiveness others, aren't my choice.

Yeah, it really depends on the situation. Some things are easier to forgive, while others are better left behind.

I can forgive anything, but I don't pass judgement God does.

That's a great way to look at it brother. Forgiveness brings peace and leaving the judgment to God is something I truly respect. ?

I believe people deserve another chance if they truly regret what they did.

Everyone deserves an opportunity to improve.

mistakes is normal thing in human mind every soul in the the earth do mistakes

but the point who learn from this mis act to be better <3

I think the difference maker is whether the mistake was a one-off or a reflection of their character. If someone screws up, owns it, and changes their behavior, a second chance is usually fair. But if they just apologize to get out of trouble and do the exact same thing a month later, that's not a mistake anymore, that's a pattern. Forgiveness is free, but trust has to be re-earned

Well said! Everyone deserves a second chance, but actions matter more than apologies. If someone keeps making the same mistake, it's hard to trust them again.
