Thread: What's one expense you wish you could completely eliminate?

Mine would definitely be the electricity bill. ?

I swear, every time the bill comes, I wonder how we managed to use that much electricity. With the kids at home, the TV, air conditioner and other appliances are always being used, so I guess it makes sense.

I don't really mind paying for things that keep my family comfortable, but imagine never having to worry about that bill again. I'd rather put that money into our savings or use it to treat my wife and kids once in a while.

Moving to a different country every 3 months sounds exciting and having electricity included in the rent is definitely a bonus. Less bills to worry about and more freedom to enjoy life!

I hate having to pay for electricity too. Let alone renting

I agree on the electric bill, I would like to eliminate rent or electric. Eventually I will. I plan to buy a house again someday, pay it off, have solar and well. I talk about this all the time, but it's because I'm determined to make it happen.

Owning a fully paid off house with solar power and your own water supply would definitely take a huge burden off your monthly expenses. I really hope you make it happen someday brother ?

I think eliminating all costs of owning a house would be the greatest gift to everyone.

It will, I am speaking it into existence every day and I will keep working until it happens. Right now is the time to start making money, AI is giving us such an opportunity.

Mortgage Payment, or any and all repair costs for transportation.

Mortgage payments can take a huge chunk out of your budget and unexpected vehicle repairs can be a real headache. Imagine how much money we could save without having to worry about either of them!
