Thread: Harambe Got Put Down, But Not the Tiger?

Now, I'm not for putting down any animal, but it still sucks how Harambe was put down while the tiger wasn't. I get that every situation is different, but the double standard is crazy. Harambe became a whole cultural moment, and I still wonder how differently things might've played out if the roles were reversed.

The humans have learned from their mistakes.

Exactly what you said man, people always have double standards.

It's in the tiger's nature to attack, so it was normal. Initially, they even tried to pass it off as "A guy attacked the tiger". But for Harambe, no..

RIP Harambe

Tale as old as time, similar actions but not always the same outcome

I agree that the outcome seems unfair, especially given how Harambe became a cultural moment. It's interesting to consider how different the reaction might have been if the roles were reversed.
