Thread: Looking for honest feedback on Jinx Bets \(eSoccer picks\) — what would make you pay?

NotJinx - October 15, 2026, 1:43 pm

Hey everyone,

I launched Jinx Bets about 2 weeks ago: value picks for eSoccer (EsportsBattle) and eBasket, sent to Telegram before kickoff. Every pick and result is public, wins and losses, with a live record on the site.

Site: <https://jinxbets.com> · Results: <https://jinxbets.com/results>

I'd really value blunt feedback:

1. First impression of the site — does it look trustworthy or like another scam tipster?
2. Is the pricing reasonable (€129/week, €349/month)? What would you expect to pay?
3. Do public results convince you, or what else would you need to see?
4. What would stop you from buying after the free trial?

Negative feedback is welcome, that's what I'm after.

Thanks for taking a look.

Just be aware anyone who buys will be able to share all signals and bets with their friends simply by using a site like cloner.club which mirrors messages from discord and telegram servers into a separate one.

I'd be more informational, Return over time, Returns this month, Customers who had the similar returns.

Good point, thanks.

Fair point, thanks. I just added a returns section to the homepage: total, this month, last 7 days and week by week, plus what you'd have made depending on the day you joined. No reviews yet since nobody's free trial has ended (first ones finish early November). I've asked trial members for honest feedback and will only post real ones.
