Genuine question, I see so many members who have been here for YEARS! and I really do wonder how did most of you come across this site? me personally I have no clue how I found this site, I've known about it for while now and finally just thought to myself "fuck it, ill become a member" and all the different threads and groups just keep me updated on about everything I would want to be updated on, which makes it pretty easy to come by daily.. always expecting something new.

A friend told me about the site. Otherwise I wouldn't know it existed...

I typed "hacking forum" on Google and it was the first or second link maybe. Back in the days I went back to school at 24 years old to study IT, during the courses we talked a little bit about hacking et security and it caught my attention. I wanted to learn more with the hope of working in cybersecurity one day.

It was 8 years ago, time flies ?

A friend of mine showed me HF while we were talking on some other forums.

I am trying to remember how I first got here...

I was always interested in computer tech and possibly gathering game accounts or modding of some kind.

I probabably stayed because the site has some insane good value for exploits in the past and then always had good deals on things to buy too.

After awhile I just sort of realized that the people here are usually more intelligent than most and is good to gravitate to people smarter than you.

I desperately searched for a place to teach me how to be "opsec" and then I found a thread through google and decided to stay here for all the awesome members I met and the unlimited knowledge this place provides.

COD lobbies but also modded and flashed Xbox systems throughout the years.

Really any game or possible option that was possible, I was looking into it!

I first came to HF in 2012 and i believe me finding the forum was when i was looking for game hacks or something. I dont even remember the name i used.... never posted much tho i usually lurked. then was inactive and my account got closed for inactivity and then i came back years later back in 2019.

so much has changed around here... I really miss the old days of HF. everyday it was so active like literally 100+ new threads a day ahh you were probably one of the homies that granted us the amazing gift of zombie land on bo2, the modded game modes were so goated back then.

Google brought me here, was searching for hack related topics

Jinu - October 17, 2026, 10:26 am

You can read it in my profile. :D

I started off first on halostrike as I was interested in team standbys in H2. I got tired of playing legit and getting cheated on when you hit lvl 40+. It then gradually got into modding. Then it got into host booting because of DONTCARE. He was a known booter (the first that I know of).

Then halostrike got shortly shut down and I was still interested in bots and kicking people offline and it eventually lead me to here in 2010. I also got into RATs and found poisonivy (throwback).
