

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Create gmail account without phone number? its1988andwearefree - October 19, 2026, 6:45 pm

I'm not asking for how would I create any email account without a phone number, specifically I would like to create a gmail address

When I try to make an account it asks me to scan a QR code with my phone, if just a phone number is enough I can possibly just buy a throwaway phone. But the fact it wants me to use my actual phone concerns me, if I recall I tried to get the QR code link just from a screenshot and just use it in a desktop browser but it didn't work if my memory serves right.

Does anyone know of a bypass to this? Or a to put a phone number on the desktop browser on signup, Thank you.

Also, tried getting the link from the QR code and trying it on desktop myself, not working still.

Th3Hulk - October 21, 2026, 9:21 am

(Oct 19, 2026 06:45 PM)its1988andwearefree Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm not asking for how would I create any email account without a phone number, specifically I would like to create a gmail address

When I try to make an account it asks me to scan a QR code with my phone, if just a phone number is enough I can possibly just buy a throwaway phone. But the fact it wants me to use my actual phone concerns me, if I recall I tried to get the QR code link just from a screenshot and just use it in a desktop browser but it didn't work if my memory serves right.

Does anyone know of a bypass to this? Or a to put a phone number on the desktop browser on signup, Thank you.

Also, tried getting the link from the QR code and trying it on desktop myself, not working still.
There is no reliable bypass for the QR code on a desktop browser in 2026. If it detects you're on a VPN, a data-center IP, or a device that has created multiple accounts recently, it will hard-require that phone verification . The whole point of the QR code is to prevent people from using disposable or virtual numbers .

The way around this is to change the conditions of the signup. Hope that gives you some clue.

ConsoleMan - October 21, 2026, 12:25 pm

(Oct 19, 2026 06:45 PM)its1988andwearefree Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm not asking for how would I create any email account without a phone number, specifically I would like to create a gmail address

When I try to make an account it asks me to scan a QR code with my phone, if just a phone number is enough I can possibly just buy a throwaway phone. But the fact it wants me to use my actual phone concerns me, if I recall I tried to get the QR code link just from a screenshot and just use it in a desktop browser but it didn't work if my memory serves right.

Does anyone know of a bypass to this? Or a to put a phone number on the desktop browser on signup, Thank you.

Also, tried getting the link from the QR code and trying it on desktop myself, not working still.
You should have a look on google about buying one or two uses online phone number. Look for recent ones because Google is good at banning services like that