Thread: What is the dumbest thing you believed as a kid?

Kids believe some of the most ridiculous things, and somehow they make perfect sense at the time.

I remember thinking that adults basically had life figured out. Then I grew up and realized most of them are just guessing and hoping for the best ?

What's the dumbest thing you genuinely believed when you were a kid? Something you were absolutely convinced was true until you got older and realized how ridiculous it sounded.

I'm curious to hear some of your stories.

Damn bro, life really gave you a reality check early.

I honestly believed that if I swallowed a watermelon seed, a watermelon would grow inside my stomach. ?

I used to be so careful when eating watermelon, making sure I didn't accidentally swallow any seeds. Looking back, I don't know how I believed that!

When I was like 7, I genuinely believed that if you swallowed a watermelon seed, a watermelon would start growing in your stomach. I was terrified of eating fruit with seeds for months.

I used to think that when electricity goes off at home , the cars should shut down too , I used to wonder how everything around me is dark and there are still lights in the streets going from direction to another !

1) Believing in Santa Claus

2) Believing that if you swallowed chewing gum it would stay in your stomach for 7 years, this was a myth I often heard as a child.

I believed that staying awake late enough would let me see Santa Claus in action.

That my dad loved me?

That the easter bunny knew the tooth fairy?

That fat fuck could fit down my chimney?
