

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Would you rather have peace or excitement?

sharn - October 22, 2026, 5:39 pm

Sometimes the most exciting moments in life come with risks and situations we cannot fully control. On the other hand, peace often comes from knowing where you stand and not having to overthink everything.

Honestly, I need both to feel truly happy.
I want a life that feels safe but still surprises me in the best ways.

Which kind of life do you think would make you happier?

Deany - October 22, 2026, 6:00 pm

Um yeah I will be choosing peace all day.

Pimping - October 22, 2026, 6:34 pm

I feel the same i think i would need a bit of both

Charlie Sheen - October 22, 2026, 7:58 pm

I would enjoy some peace. I can't wait for things to calm down.

Jamika - October 22, 2026, 11:32 pm

I really love peace and quiet. I just wish everything would go smoothly and naturally, as expected, without any drama, surprises, or unnecessary excitement.

Eran - October 23, 2026, 2:00 am

I crave both at the moment so much it's pretty much impossible to answer.

Sift - October 23, 2026, 3:14 am

Would love peace myself.

Th3HulK - October 23, 2026, 6:15 am

I choose Peace, had enough chaos and drama to last a lifetime. Excitement is overrated honestly, it usually just means something is going wrong or about to go wrong.

DryNode - October 23, 2026, 9:37 am

Peace comes first for me, but if I could have both then I'd go with both 100%

Jinu - October 23, 2026, 9:44 am

I'd go for a mix of both. Having a calm base makes big surprises even more special. Like getting a gift in the mail instead of a surprise package. One's a shock, the other a delight.

?ystem - October 23, 2026, 11:35 am

Peace, any day of the week. Due to unforeseen circumstances, I've experienced a great deal of "excitement" and everything that word carries. It's only been the last few years that I'm finally experiencing peace.

Lefty - October 23, 2026, 12:01 pm

I think I would rather have peace, I have not had that before and that would be exciting