Thread: Never Trust School Administration Techs

Zach - October 29, 2010, 8:22 pm

This is my true story, I don't give a fuck if you believe it or not.

I created a batch file in computer repair class, I sent it to my teacher through a program named "SyncroEyes." It was a simple batch file with the command:

@echo Off

Echo Zach likes this class

After he opened it, 36 hours later his computer breaks. He went to the assistant principle, they said it executed deadly commands to destroy system32. They suspended me for a week.

After I explained how the batch was harmless and simply said nothing offensive, I was suspended me and claimed it was encrypted with javascript.

A batch file... ENCRYPTED WITH JAVASCRIPT!?

I had several other techs review it, and claim it was nothing but harmless. The logs were completely harmless.

Finally, after this, they still go at it and claim I'm a terrorist and will sue me in criminal court for destroying tax payer property.

Remember, this batch file was nothing but harmless and did not destroy anything.

So, answer me these questions.

1. If my file truly destroyed system32, howcome two computers didn't break? I ran it on mine to make sure it said what I wanted it to say. "Zach likes this class."
2. A batch file encrypted with Javascript? If you really think I could do that, okay, but howcome there is no junk code? When you encrypt something it changes to junk code, they claimed it just disappeared.

And here I am, going to court with a bunch of idiots, and I'm paying $350/hr for a federal lawyer.

Robie - October 29, 2010, 8:25 pm

There not going to take you to court, There bluffing.

And even if they did, They wouldnt win.

Zach - October 29, 2010, 8:28 pm

I don't care, I have to pay thousands for a lawyer no matter who wins... All because their stupidity.

Automatic Coding - October 29, 2010, 8:30 pm

Dude, teach me how to make a batch file that has no extra code and still fucks up there PC? and has a delay of 32 hours with no processes running!

Only joking (but if you know, teach me)...schools are shit, I was coding a game in flash at my school

(learning it) some paki non-speaking English tech person comes up to me "no playing games!" and turned off my pc...I was like "WHAT WAS THAT FOR?" All she could say was "No playing games!"

Zach - October 29, 2010, 8:33 pm

If you code an app or anything at our school you're considered a threat and will be watched by the administration.

Seriously.

James. - October 29, 2010, 8:34 pm

Your computer tech's are idiots.

Hopefully your situation gets sorted out, and you get some sort of compensation for your struggle. Maybe you can like, counter-sue for pain and suffering or one of those things like that...

Seriously.

I know, I was writing pre-code for a program I was coding in VB (in a text document) and uploaded it to dropbox, I was leaving the ICT block and the head of the school, my ICT teacher and the ICT tech people (like 5 of them) all stood around me and asked what was I doing, I spent 3 hours after school explaining to them and they just kept asking "WHY WOULD YOU CODE?" I'm like "WHY WOULD YOU NOT LET ME LEARN?" if you read the code it connects to the internet and logs into a site, then uploads a file that the user chooses and waits 15 seconds then print the results on the form but they said it somehow it is going to "upload and decrypt" every file that contains and username and password and I got ban from the ICT block for a year, when I got home I called the government and reported my school to that, some pro-ass IT guy who knows a shit load of languages came down read my code and told 2 of the ICT people there fired, AND told the school that they can't stop me from coding in school, and if they think my code is a virus they have to forward a screen shot of it him first ?

Fallenour - October 29, 2010, 8:39 pm

let them take you to court, the school district will have to pay the court costs when they lose the case, and that will REALLY make them look bad, itll tarnish their record, and could be used as grounds for termination even if they have tenure.

Well, I go to a private school. The staff knows nothing about computers except how to turn them off. And even then they just unplug the power cords.

Half of the computers in the library are screwed up cuz of me tryin to infect with rat's and batches :/ They have just now implemented wifi into our school, time for some fun xD

On Topic: Good luck with the court case.

prt1999 - October 29, 2010, 9:07 pm

Don't worry.

If they do. Defend yourself and don't admit anything. Just keep silent and hire a lawyer to defend you.

Sage Mode - October 29, 2010, 9:10 pm

If you ask me, your school needs to hire better administration technicians, and the fact the school administration team in general has chosen to behave in such a stubborn manor is straight out ridiculous.

Zach - October 29, 2010, 9:18 pm

I plead the 5th on everything now, I'm done talking.

Yes, we do need better techs.

Anyways, since I was suspended on false presence, I'll counter sue for impendance on education.

BigE - October 29, 2010, 9:26 pm

i feel your pain. i had the same problem with my school techs, except it was a vb script for quick basic server management(shutdown, restart, etc) that i made at a SCHOOL sponsored seminar. the worst it could do was kill processes, but the principal accused me of hacking the school district servers, and stealing passwords, and then the tech said it had "potential" to do what the principal said, so now its on my record that im a "hacker" and they are watching me. and when i asked about it coming from a school seminar, he paused for a minute, and then said i was lucky he wasnt going to the police. i should have told him to, that way someone who knows more than how to turn on a computer would have decided the verdict.

in all honesty, if they have no proof that you destroyed property or wanted to do anything malicious, they have nothing on you, and you just have to be calm, composed, and have well thought out answers to question, and you will do fine.

then sue for taking away your education opportunities with no reason, and for psychological trauma.

Unholy Faith - October 29, 2010, 9:43 pm

Who do they hire now?

They should actually hire people who know how to work with the computers. My friend is a tech guy around our school, and I took the admin password off, and he's like "HOW DID YOU DO THAT! I PUT RANDOM NUMBERS!". I just facepalmed and told him, "The Hiren's BootCD". Then he put it back, and I took it off, and still going on to this day.

geewizzer - October 29, 2010, 9:46 pm

i have hacked my school and i can do anything I want, I can even shutdown the server :D!!

2 Cents - October 29, 2010, 9:46 pm

Meh I sometimes make simple programs in VB, but I always use another students account which I found the password for (He uses the same pass for all his accounts).

Hope this shit gets sorted out bro.

Nohandlebar - October 29, 2010, 9:54 pm

A similar situation happened to me. Last year, I opened CMD then all the people in my room were surprised and the teacher suspended my rights and they wrote in my folders that I was dangerous with computers lol.

You Are Free - October 29, 2010, 9:54 pm

And this is another good reason to be homeschooled.

I'm very lucky, I can code whenever I want (and trust me, I code a lot).

I did that, and they found it, but they called it a password stealer, and a district hacking device, but failed to understand that it wouldn't work on linux servers or the local ip, b/c the servers for the whole district run on linux.

hahahah Yeah my techies at my school are douche bags. I was close to getting suspended for tampering with school computers. I was in physics class and having some fun in the bios of the laptops, and changed passwords and added all kinds of beeping. (Best part was adding fingerprint recognition so people couldn't login). Anyway i changed the pws on 2-3 comps, hoping to get a laugh next time our class went to use them. The next period i wasnt there, and the class got murdered about someone "hacking" computers and stuff. After a while a fessed up and had to go down to the techies and tell em what had happend, the most awkward part was writing down what the passwords i changed em to were, "dick , fuck lol" :P They still couldn't unlock 2 of the other computers, so apparently they through 2 entire laptops out due to my adding a bios password. I ended up only getting a 30min detention, which was lucky. But I'm just unhappy they through out 2 perfectly good laptops becasue they couldnt change a password back.

Moral of the story is, techies schools hire these days, are rejected corporate company workers who arent as smart and handle peddy students account troubles. Good luck with your court case bro.

Momiji - October 30, 2010, 5:46 pm

The worst part though, is that my web-design teacher is a fat-fuck that doesn't know shit. I fell asleep from boredom, woke-up, he asked a question on shit we hadn't learned yet (I already knew it but I felt like being an ass). I gave a bullshit answer, and he said "Wow, I'm surprised you knew that".

The kick-ass techie at the school was fucking around once and went to the bathroom with his lap-top still opened. Me (being really stupid) went over and checked it out, when he came back he says "As long as you weren't watching porn, I could care less". Then he just walks off with it. I did see him making a website and he put AdSense on it. When I went through his history he was on paypal about 20 times in under an hour and he had made a whole bunch of websites for people through a web-design freelancing site. I'm pretty sure he freelances but the carding thing seems plausible too.

The best part, he is bald, has a goatee, and wears a black trench-coat all the time.

My Computer Teacher asks MY help in class all the time too.

funny thing is, my mate got his internet banned from the school for 2 years. Heres the thing, all he did was, he opened a batch file that opens random programs. Wow, this happened to me once. I got my school IT's password and remote desktop to her computer and copied all of her files which were mainly random documents. And I was suspended and the principal said they might press charges because she had all of her bank info on the computer.

Sunshine State - October 30, 2010, 9:26 pm

wow even i did worst to school computers and it takes em 3 monhts just to figure out wht hapen to like windows 32 or somthing there retarded and idk y even school computers use internet explorer or McAfee or norton stupid people these days no offence to people who use norton or internet explor my friend wanted to update Source SDK for his game design class, but needed ports forwarded. the admin didnt know how to forward ports.

(Oct 30, 2010 08:28 PM)Zach Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Oh yeah because sending a batch file is completely illegal. All it said was hi....

in the schools eyes it is. what my school was saying was that they only wanted to send me the message that if i did this at Uni or at my workplace i would be in jail. which is bull because at one of those places they have people that arnt microsoft word professional certificate dropouts, and would see there is nothing bad.

Flashnox™ - October 30, 2010, 9:45 pm

You win the court case and then sue them right after it for false accusation.

Oh yeah, my cousin's friend was sent to alternative school because he hacked something, I'm not really sure though..

Modesty - October 31, 2010, 3:41 pm

Lol I test my RAT on my school servers using a remote desktop connection to exeucte the client. They don't even know. I pretty much have my school in my hands. But yh I'd love to be in your position and go to court for it.

Biohazard™ - October 31, 2010, 3:48 pm

A similar thing happened to me with batch. Harmless file was turned into something malicious. School techs are just generally lying douche bags because we are a threat to their network and jobs. 'Cept mine got me a full page newspaper story with no trouble ;D

That's completely different... Your intentions were malicious, all I made was a batch that said hi.

If anything I'd sue for impedance of education and violation of IEP rights, and I'd get the best lawyer in Saint Louis.

You mean you trusted them in the first place?

Gonzo - November 1, 2010, 3:30 pm

My college is fine about basically anything we do lol. I take in my own laptop and plug it into the router via ethernet, then run an adhoc network for peoples ipods etc and nothing gets said. Today i sat there coding java all day and no one could have cared less.

Echoes - November 2, 2010, 3:05 pm

Sounds like a bunch of bullshit.

Sorry to hear this happen, and I hope that your problems get solved and you win this case.

Counter-Sue for lawyer payments?

Hecker21 - March 26, 2011, 9:32 pm

My school blocks google.com/images but not images.google.com
So dumb.

Chris Versaci - March 26, 2011, 9:40 pm

definetly win.

Omg this is so sad, computers are EVERYWHERE in our everyday life, and like most people don't even know the simplest stuff apart from how to make a google search, or turn on the computer and go on facebook. I lol'd at 'encrypted with java' haha.

Also, Zach, I can't reply to your PM's because I'm not on your buddy list.. that's the error I get replying to your PM. -.- So I have to post on your latest thread to actually tell you this lol.

We had a lawyer fight it with them, they looked very stupid.

9 Toes - April 9, 2011, 10:34 pm

Counter sue? If your paying you might as well try right?

Edit: The lawyer might enjoy it to means more pay.

Itachi Uchiha - April 9, 2011, 10:41 pm

Counter sue, once you win the case you should be able to counter sue. Harassment maybe. Get a couple bucks from th gove.

FLMusician - April 9, 2011, 10:45 pm

Counter sue FOR THE WIN.

BEST OF LUCK :D

Dyn?sty - April 9, 2011, 10:54 pm

Sue them for manslaughter

Mr. Fink - April 9, 2011, 11:29 pm

I believe you bro. School techs are idiots. I suggest you delete all the hacking programs on your computer and somehow make it untraceable with your isp, as the FBI is probably going to get involved..

HakkuR - April 9, 2011, 11:33 pm

All I can say is you made a crazy choice to do that and good luck to you man, Hacking is taken seriously and even if what you did was not mad serious they can take it that way. I take your side in this matter but the choice you made was dumb to do that on a school pc.

Capps - April 9, 2011, 11:35 pm

wow.... this is fucking retarded.

SlimDickShady - April 9, 2011, 11:36 pm
