Also guy's if you ship one to your address for example 123 poop st and want another pack ship it to 123 poop st B, Unless there is a "B"

[IMG]http://i654.photobucket.com/albums/uu263/1001tucker/ifyouwerehere.jpg[/IMG]

Yeah, Ignore these fucking try hard rocket scientists please.

Saying that they'll send you spam mail, there's always one rotten egg in my freebie threads and then the others join with this "investigation"
GTFO and take your TROLL with you.

Google 'USA GOLD' on Google maps... What do you get?

The middle of the pacific ocean..

Can you explain how my lighter was shipped from the middle of the ocean? (Which was free)
Point proved, now all of you DAMN 'Scientists' need to gtfo before you start getting bored and measuring the flaps of your E-Vagina.

Proceed at your own caution. Some people say that they have gotten spam mail from them but I highly doubt it because they have no proof.

? ????I ? - November 20, 2010, 3:38 pm

1st and awesome!!

Edit: Great! No need to pay for shipping..!

It's a scam...

"Ok, so I've done the free t-shirt thing before and have gotten a few from reputable companies, but something about this didn't seem right. So let's apply my 3-step process (patent-pending!) for analyzing your typical internet scam site.

1. Grammar-Fail: The grammar on this site is correct. More than likely the scammer's native language is English.

2. Physical Address(es):

IARR Inc.

New York Office,

304 Hudson Street,

12th Floor,

New York City, NY 10013 USA

This check is a FAIL. A little bit of Google-Fu showed that I couldn't find any businesses at this address going past the 6th floor. After calling around I finally got directed to the lobby of the building, who verified there is no 12th floor (only 8 floors), and there is no business by the name or initials of IARR Inc. registered at that building. And really, am I supposed to believe they have the entire floor of a building in downtown NYC? Not even a suite number?"

Why wouldn't they put a real address? If it's a so-called company then they should have their address up. Why would they give a fake address? Because it doesn't exist. They'll sell your address to marketing or something.

The more and more I think about it, seems like a scam.

Quote:Bring Limewire Back is a not for profit website run by a small group of Indepent Artists who strongly believe that free music and movie distribution services (like Limewire) are a necessity for smaller artists to distribute their work online. Were would a small group of indepent artists get the money for all those shirts?

Quote:By signing the petition you agree that your name can be used should this document be submitted to any government body for consideration.

Free T-Shirts will be provided on a first come, first serve basis. While supplies last. They could get 100x signs and use that for there cause, and only really have 1 shirt, I really cant see them being able to send everyone a shirt.

I actually saw this thread about 3 days ago, and for some reason at the time I was alittl hessitent about submiting my information, so I decided to think about it, and the more I thought about it I thought it could be a scam, I thought I should say something.

We recommend contacting the other email provider for further information about the cause of this error.

The error that the other server returned was: 550 550 Unrouteable address (state 14)

So this seems more and more illegitimate imho.

How long does it take to get normally?

rob45player4 - November 29, 2010, 3:51 pm

Sweet, nice find. I meen Limewire has already returned but hell if I get a free shirt why not? :P

totalwarrior - November 29, 2010, 4:29 pm

I don't care about limewire I just want a free t shirt.

popimp - December 16, 2010, 9:27 pm

yea yea just ordered mines

When this thread had first been posted I took advantage of the option to receive a free t-shirt to openly display my desires to bring back LimeWire into the community. But, to this day I have not received a single t-shirt nor any sort of recognition regarding the topic in discussion.
