My math teacher is really pissing me off when calling my house and I'm tired of him calling how do I block his phone number from calling my house?

He usually calls from school.

Well the only way I know is by contacting your phone company and letting them know you like like to block the number.

Keep in mind your parent may be notified of this in the mail, so if you're blocking his number to stay out of trouble I would keep an eye on the mail.

If he is calling because of your grades or something like that, they will find another way to notify your parents if the call is blocked.

How about having something to contribute to the topic?

Just tell me what to do.

I'm contributing by telling you that I would advise not doing it for your own good.

But if you want to then yeah you would have to call your phone company or maybe find some website that would do it for you.

Dial [STAR]67, then dial the number you would like to block. It may not work for all phones, I really cant say either way.

Be the first to pick up the phone every time it rings

Don't say anything, wait until the person who rang talks

Once they say hello? Decide if it's your teacher or not

If it's your teacher hang up, if not then whatever.

He'll get pissed off soon enough and stop ringing
