

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: This copy of Windows is not genuine...

Da God - December 9, 2010, 10:50 am

I am running Windows 7, have been for a few months now, and about a month and a half ago, my Desktop background vanished to black and randomly Windows warnings pop-up (While in use, and on boot-up) prompting me to contact Windows to purchase a new key or enter a new product key. I have attempted to enter several product keys, all valid, and all which return the same inexplicable error.

I was interested if there was anyway going about removing this; I am usually against keygens without previewing the source, but at this point I really just want to find a solution, or be told that there is none and to stop looking.

Obi-Wan Cannabis - December 9, 2010, 10:51 am

Windows 7 Loader by Daz is the solution for your problems !

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=658781>

Pulse? - December 9, 2010, 1:02 pm

Try the latest Windows 7 loader. It activates and makes your copy genuine.

Once Timeless - December 9, 2010, 1:10 pm

RemoveWAT. I have a thread on it.

-mothered- - December 9, 2010, 1:48 pm

Just be careful not to apply too many activators.

This can really mess up the activation process, hence the Installation of Windows may then be required.

duexx - December 9, 2010, 1:54 pm

find the windows 7 you have, Ultimate etc.

Then search on torrent sites/google for W7 activator.

Load the activator and problem solved.

btchz - December 9, 2010, 2:30 pm

use 7Loader is working :)

unteagle - December 9, 2010, 2:57 pm

my sisters computer says her windows vista isn't genuine. Pretty funny considering she got it directly from best buy and then all of the sudden it started popping up.

NoradIV - December 9, 2010, 10:40 pm

RemoveWAT does a great job. It delete the WAT (windows activation tool) preventing this shit to happen

Strik9 - December 10, 2010, 7:02 am

(Dec 9, 2010 02:48 PM)mothered Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Just be careful not to apply too many activators.

This can really mess up the activation process, hence the Installation of Windows may then be required.

I agree with you, I like to keep it safe and not use a loader or activator. I am weary about using one.