

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Beginner Question

Oceanus - January 11, 2011, 3:20 am

I want to learn how to make a website. So i decided that i would make one and learn while doing. I took a website that i go to watch anime Website link and i will try to create one similar. My question is how would i go about doing it. I fell like if I put the website out there i would work harder on it and i have 100$ to invest so I though i would get a host and name on anhosting.(if there's one better that not in America please tell me). Thank you for helping out.

Bacon - January 11, 2011, 4:44 am

Assuming your upload speed is decent (at least 200kbps) or you have someone that will do it for you, you need to start uploading the videos to a site that will play them back as flv's like megaupload, youtube would work but the videos will be pulled down... You can also convert them to .flv files yourself and host the videos on your own server. You're going to need a decent amount of videos already on the website to get people interested as well, not just a couple (this is why upload speed is important)

The only other thing is you'd probably need help or a lot of time to check your videos often to make sure they aren't pulled down. People get pissed off when they watch a few episodes of a show then the next one doesn't work.

Oceanus - January 11, 2011, 5:28 am

(Jan 11, 2011 05:44 AM)Bacon Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Assuming your upload speed is decent (at least 200kbps) or you have someone that will do it for you, you need to start uploading the videos to a site that will play them back as flv's like megaupload, youtube would work but the videos will be pulled down... You can also convert them to .flv files yourself and host the videos on your own server. You're going to need a decent amount of videos already on the website to get people interested as well, not just a couple (this is why upload speed is important) good to know but i was talking about the site creation it self. like setting up the pages how would i add a new series and be organized like he is.

The only other thing is you'd probably need help or a lot of time to check your videos often to make sure they aren't pulled down. People get pissed off when they watch a few episodes of a show then the next one doesn't work.

noldi18 - January 11, 2011, 5:36 am

Assuming your upload speed is decent (at least 200kbps)