Thread: [\[Photoshop Tutorial\] Youtube channel background - 3](#)

Novica - January 12, 2011, 3:53 am

Hi!

I decide to create new tutorial about YouTube backgrounds!

This tutorial is a little bit harder than my first two tutorials only because you need to use filters/adjustments and much more things that I didn't use in first two tutorials.

While I was doing this YouTube background I take SS for every step that I made. This tut will be present to you as 23 pictures! I think reading is boring and that all of you will better do YouTube background if you watching at images and do what you see on them!

This tutorial is made with lots of love and patient, if you don't like it don't comment!

Thanks!

Enjoy in tutorial, if you have any question feel free to ask!

This is how BG should look like... It's a little bit cloudy... If you dont want it to look like that whan you want to save it make sure that you select Progressive - It will look the same with less KB...

If you like this background, you can download it here.

better but still pretty basic but nice tut because its noob friendly and you took consideration in prt scrning 23pics :D but still not the knock out can you maybe pm me your MSN?

Revoke - January 13, 2011, 3:57 am

It looks kinda blurry when its on the actual background.

Put the pixels up a little bit more.

I really have no clue, but is it in image->color balance if so, what options eh?

1. So you need to create new layer, and on that layer add brush... After that make sure that brush layer is under the template layer...

2. When you click on color balance little window will show up... At that window you have Tone Balance, make sure that you select all of them and on all of them play with color level until it become blue :D

ihasaaccount - January 17, 2011, 2:17 pm

Opps, Well i just figured it out with out reading your post. didn't see it until i edited my last post.

I did it differently i duplicated it layer 5 and then i turned off the stroke in the blending options then used the vector line brush tool and it worked.
